HOPE FOR THE CROWN PRINCE

HIS MALADY MAY NOT BE OF A CAN-CEROUS NATURE.

The Analysis by Prof. Virchow Inspires Encouragement, Though Dr. Mackenzie Adheres to His Original Diagnosis-The Conservative Conference.

LONDON, Nov. 23 .- The fact that Prof. Virehow falled to find absolutely unmistakeable cancerous germs in the last substanc; and discharge from the throat of the or wn prince examined by him, coupled with the patient's excellent general health, e courages the hope that the experts who examined him at San Remo were mistaken in their conclusions. Dr. Mackenzie, nevertheless, insists that the periods of convalescence enjoyed by the prince prove that his disgnosis was correct at the outset, and asserts that the discharged matter sent to Prof. Virchow was necessarily disturbed in transmission, and therefore valueless as indicating the true nature of the patient's malady. Still, he admits that further analyels may detect something upon which may be based indisputable proof that the orig-

be based indisputable proof that the original diagnosis was incorrect, and expresses its willingness to be governed in his optimizations by what the German experts may find. At the national conservative conference to-day Lord Salisbury said he would not once the best of the said of the world have the wit of man to produce a measure satisfactory to Mr. Trevelyan and Michael Davitt. Parliament would devote itself more to measures relating to England. The government hoped to carry a measure for reform of civil administration in England; but until there was a radical change no more to measures relating to England. The government hoped to carry a measure for reform of civil administration in England; but until there was a radical change no measure to increase powers of local government in Ireland would be submitted. The government was prepared to meet the threatened obstruction of parliamentary measures. Drasife reforms in parliamentary procedure were leeded to prevent a waste of time. He hoped these measures would effect a restoration of the character of the house. The question of regulating the liquor traffic would have the foremost place. He was in favor of liberty in the traffic, in as far as was consistent with social order. He was opposed to church disestablishment, but reforms are needed to remove the existing evils. He promises a measure to remove tithe taxes on land. Measures for the relief of agriculturists would receive the readiest consideration. He regarded the Trafalgar Square demonstration as lawless meetings. Gladstone could not preach defiance of law to the Irish without his advice being followed in England. The government was determined to maintain the supremacy of law. He could not understand what induced English sympathy for William O'Brien, who broke the law and incited others to lawlessness. He did not think the stacks of the liberals would confuse the moral sense of the English nation.

The attempt made at Thurles to-day to restore unity in the Gaelic Athletic Association was a failure. Messrs. PHESIDENT GREYT TO RESIGN.

PARIS, NOV. 23.—President Grovy to-day informed M. Maret, a radical member of the chamber of deputies for the department of the Seine, that he had decided to resign. He said he would to morrow ask M. Ribot to form a ministry to superintend the meeting of the congress of the senate and the chamber of deputies, which will select a new president. If M. Ribot should refuse to form a ministry he will ask M. Goblet to do so. M. Grevy further stated that he will not quit his post before issuing an address to the country, in which he will repudiate responsibility for the present state of affairs, and deciare that his retirement is mored by the impossibility of governing the country. He will depart from the presidency with the sincerest wishes for the future of the republic.

It is stated that during his interview with M. Maret to-day President Greyy was greatly affected, and pleaded piteously for time. M. Maret, however, was obdurate. He said that too much time had been lost already; that it was the duty of the president to resign immediately, and that he should send a message to the chamber not later than Saturday. It is reported that M. Grevy worked at the message until a late hour to-night. A scoret meeting, attended MM. Clemenceau, Granet, Lockroy, Rochefort, and others, was held to-night to discuss the question of a successor to M. Grevy. It is rumored that all military candidates were rejected.

Considerable confusion was caused during the evening. Several protested violently, and many, including a company of the 60th regiment, left the hall. The introduced him, not as a clergyman, but au Irishman. He pleaded guilty to the implied charge of being a clergyman, and also of being an Irishman. He then caustically criticised Archbishop Corrigan and the pope for suspending him for expressing his own opinion. He also referred to the fact that twenty-five years ago he wanted to speak at a Fenlan meeting, but was deterred by fear of suspension. His reference to Archbishop Corrigan caused much confusion.

respecting the inspection and drill at the Washington barracks this morning. All the commands are to assemble at their armories at 9 o'clock shart, and proceed from thence to the barracks. The drill begins at 19:30 o'clock sharp.

Gen. Ordway stated that should rain occur it be various commands will remain at their armories and there be inspected and drilled by a detail of officers for that purpose. In this particular Gen. Ordway will drill the 1st battalion, Maj. Urell the 2d, officers of the staff the 3d, 5th, 6th, and 7th, and Maj. Moore the 4th battalion. The reports submitted by the captains show 1,600 men ready for the drill, and of this number 800 will appear in full regulation uniform. The parade will take place about 2:30 o'clock, only the uniformed men participating. Headed by the full Mariae band, the route of march will be up Fourands-half street to Pennaylvania avenue, thence to Seventeenth, to k street, and at MaPherson square the parade will be dismissed. The drills will take place at 10:30 a. m. and end at 2 p. m.

Gen. Ordway does not expect great things of his men, as the organization may be said to be hardly in condition to give exhibition drills and maneuvers. The officers stated that their men were very enthusiastic over the drill and would do the very best they could. The signal office notified Gen. Ordway that a special weather report for to-day for the District would be issued. Last night the armories were crowded with members of the various commands hard at work getting ready to carry out to-day's programme. the official returns of the recent election for members of the legislature as received by the secretary of the commonwealth, furnishes the following figures (leaving out the county of Nansemond, from which there are two returns:) Total Democratic vote, 113,-555; tetal Republican vote, 116,940; Democratic majority in the state on popular vote, 2,615. The first return from Nansemond gives a Republican majority of 353, leaving a net Democratic majority of 2,256. In the counties of Ameria, Greensville, Nottoway, Stafford, and Sussex there were no Democratic nominees for the house of delegates and consequently no Democratic vote was polled. These counties gave Gov. Lee 3,352 votes. Clark county had no Republican nominee for the house, but polled SI votes for the Republican senator. Tols indicates that had the five counties named polled their Democratic vote the Democratic majority in the state would have been about 5,500.

ITS CONSTRUCTION INTERRUPTED BY THE PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

The United States Proposes to Fight Back-An Injunction Against the Company Asked For-Ownership of Certain Land in Dispute.

The contest between the government and the company which has contracted with it for the construction of the proposed new bridge over the Eastern Branch, on the one hand, and the Baltimore and Potomac Railroad Company on the other, growing out of the attempt to construct the western span of the bridge, has been transferred to th A bill of complaint on behalf of the United States against the railroad company was filed on yesterday by District Attorney Worthington, which sets forth the incorpor ation of the defendant by the state of Mary-land and the authority granted to it by Conland and the authority granted to it by Con-grees to extend a lateral branch into the District of Columbia and the city of Wash-ington, and asserts that while the company had authority to enter the city 'at some point on the northern shore of the Eastern branch of the Potomac river between south L and south M streets," that said company has in point of fact entered the city at a point on the eastern branch considerably eastward of the point of entrance author-ized by Congress, and crosses with its lines Land south M streets," that said company has in point of fact entered the city at a point on the eastern branch considerably castward of the point of entrance authorized by Congress, and crosses with its lines of track the public ground at the foot of Pennsylvania avenue: that under the authority of the act of Congress of Feb. 23, 1887, the Secretary of War entered into a contract with the Groton Bridge and Manufacturing Company for the construction of a bridge over the Eastern branch, at the foot of said avenue, and that although the defendant was occupying without lawful authority a portion of the public ground at said locality, yet, in order that its operations might not be hindered or impeded by the construction of the western approach to said bridge, provision was made for an abument and pier, and between them a span 87 feet in length, at an elevation of 18 feet above the railroad tracks, for a roadway, which abument, span, and pier are to be located entirely on the public ground aforesaid.

That the railroad company has interfered with the workmen of the bridge company engaged in digging foundations for said abument, and compelled a cessation of said work by force and intimidation.

That he bridge company was engaged in making said excavation by the license and permission of the United States, and that said United States may be rendered liable to said bridge company for the damages which it may suffer by reason of the trespasses of the defendant.

The bill prays for an injunction to restrain the defendant from interfering with or in any manner molesting those engaged under the contract in making excavations or performing other work on said bridge, &c. With the bill are filed affidavits of Frank Congre, the manager and agent of the bridge company, and of John B. Dunklee, an assistant to Col. liains.

The former sets forth in detail the efforts of the bridge company to proceed with the work most of the bridge company to proceed with the work under its contract in construction of the bridge, which report was over the tracks of the railroad company at an elevation of eighteen feet, and to be such as to give a clear width of sixty-six feet, measured at right angles to the company's tracks, and also called for the face of the abutment to be six feet west of the westerly rail of said tracks, and that the clause for said span was inserted for the accommodation of the company, and in accordance with a request from its superintendent to Col. Hains.

The affidavit further states that the plan and proposal of the Groton Company was accepted, and a contract made with them, and also avers that the superintendent and regineer of the railroad company called at the office of Col. Hains in the month of May, 1887, and examined the maps and profiles of the bridge, and stated that they proposed to change and straighten the line of the tracks of said company so as to cross the line of the bridge some 159 feet east of the present location of said tracks, which change would have brought said tracks clear of said first span, and that the list set of specifications were prepared so as to provide for said change. The deponent avers that the railroad company had before this conversation commenced the work of preparing for said change, and had made considerable progress therewith that the company subsequently notified Col. Hains that the idea of changing the location of its tracks had been abandoned.

that the company subsequently notified Col. Hains that the idea of changing the location of its tracks had been abandoned. The deponent further states that Col. Hains originally contended that the expense of the span over the tracks must under the law be borne by the railroad company, and with this view had provided for a short and inexpensive span, merely clearing the tracks, as to which the company made no objection or demand for enlargement, and that it was only after the public authorities had determined that the expense of this span must be borne by the United States that the request for an enlargement was made, so as to give the width and other dimensions now provided for.

Deponent avers that the officers and agents of the railroad company kept themselves fully advised as to the progress of the preparation of the specifications and plan for said bridge, and that they obtained and had a copy of said specifications before the award of the contract for said bridge, and must have been fully informed as to the situation of the western abutment with reference to the railroad tracks, and made no claim, demand, or objection adverse to the rights of the United States until the contract had been awarded, and the work commenced. He also states that the railroad company have compelled a total cessation of work He also states that the railroad company have compelled a total cessation of work at the western end of the bridge. The case was placed in the hands of Sergeant Harbison, and last night he arrested Edward Drain, 19; Frederick Richardson, 17; and Herman Buck-holtz, 19, and they were placed behind the bars of the third precinct station charged with malicious mischief. The story of one of the prisoners is that they, accompanied by another boy named Ed. Burke, were returning from night school and that they out of pure "cussedness" broke the window, took several bottles of wine out, and drank it all, Burke, however, running away before any damage was done. None of the prisoners seemed to realize that the offense of which they had been guilty was a serious one. Their parents are respectable and the affair is one to be sincerely regretted.

A "JURY FIXER" CAUGHT.

NATHAN ADDISON TALKS PERSUASIVELY TO SIMON C. BURNETT.

and Simon Tells Judge Montgomers All About It-The Accused Arrested -The Act His Own Conception-He Thinks He Did No Wrong.

That this city has by some means or other quired an unsavory reputation, so far as s juries are concerned, no one will deny, ud last night's denouement will not assist naterially in dissipating doubts that exist some minds that there is a disposition abroad to make the jury system in the District a failure.

On Monday last Simon C. Burnett, colored, a juror in the Whitaker case, had a private interview with Judge Montgomery for the purpose of teiling all he knew about an attempt that had been made to "it?" bim. His story was that on Saturday last Nathan Addison, colored, and a messenger in the office of Commodore Harmony, acting Secretary of the Navy, had called at his karber shop, which is allow a street northwest, and wanted to speak to him; that he (Burnett) was busy, and that Addison said he would come again on Sunday, as he wanted to see him particularly, on Sunday Addison called again, and in the presence of George C. Lee asked him (Burnett) to yote "not guilty" in the case of Whitaker, now before the criminal court. Addison said that Whitaker was a friend of his and had done him favors in the past and he wanted to have him sequitted. Additional significance is given the affair by the fact that both accuser and accused are Od I Fellows, and Burnett alleges that it was in his fraternal character that Addison approached him.

As soon as Judge Montgomery heard the ored, a juror in the Whitaker case, had a Fellows, and Burnett alleges that it was in his fraternal character that Addison approached him.

As soon as Judge Monigomery heard the story he called the District autorney's attention to it and on proper information Detective Carter swore out a warrant charging Addison with "attempting to induce and persuade the said Simon C. Burnett to vote and decide said issue in favor of the sail Zrenville Whitaker."

Last night, at a few minutes after 7 o'clock, Detective Carter, accompanied by Detective Mahon, called at 512 Twenticth street and arrested Addison. He was taken to the third precinct station, and there was seen by a REPUBLICAN reporter. He is a pleasant looking man, probably about 50 years of age, and seemed to be very much surprised over his incarceration. He said, "I never thought of getting into any such trouble as this, and when the police came to my house to-night I was completely upset. I was over in Georgetown last Saturday, and called in at Burnett's shop. He was busy, and I said, 'I've got a little affair I'd like to see you about; I'll come up to-morrow,' I saw him on Sunday, and in the course o' our conversation I said, 'I have a friend who is in a little trouble now; he has assisted me, and if you can do anything for him i wish you would do it; I'd be glad to who is in a little trouble now; he has assisted me, and if you can do anything for him i wish you would do it; I'd be glad to have you do it.' Burnett then got quite excited about what I had said. He toid me that he didn't like to be approached on any such subject and was very indignant. I didn't mention any name, but I suppose it was understood that I referred to Mr. Whitaker. I never said a word about money, nor did I intimate that he would by recompensed in any way; I asked him as a riend, and when he goes on the witnesstand in the morning he'll bear out all I have said."

Addison seemed to be more worried about his two little children, sleeping alone, at home, than about himself.

Messages were sent by him to a couple of inducutial friends, but up to 2 o'clock this morning he had not been released on bail, as he hoped to be. District Attorney Worthington said last night that he would refuse anything less than $2,500 bonds.

Worthington said last night that he would refuse anything less than $2,500 bonds.

Nothing has been said, nor anything been found, that will in any way connect Mr. Whitaker with Addison's endeavor to "hang" the jury, and it seems to have been a project concocted by himself.

She resented his insuit when the fiend struck her a blow in the face, knocking her down. He attempted to outrage her, and the young girl, although suffering from the blow and the great fear that was upon her, fought desperately, until the approach of a wagon frightened the dastarily rascal and he field.
